TEXTO 1

LIVING AT MICHIGAN CREDO

The Housing Division affirms its professional and personal commitment to a sensitive, tolerant and humane community in our residence halls and family housing apartments. We desire to build residence halls and family housing communities in which individuals are not harassed, excluded or made to feel uncomfortable because of sex, color, religion, sexual orientation, lifestyle or political beliefs. Many students use their college years to explore and develop their personal identity and values, and we ardently believe that this exploration can best take place in an atmosphere of mutual respect and understanding. It is essential that human rights be a cornerstone of our enterprise, and we will continue to articulate it as such. As administrators, educators and counselors, we are committed to work with students to help them look at themselves, to examine their values and conduct, and to keep questioning those values when they reflect an origin of fear, anger or ignorance. We will continue to convey to our residents, as well as the entire University community, that acts of racial hatred and other forms of bigotry are acts of hatred against all of us and that they will not be condoned or tolerated. Individuals, both on or off campus, must share in the personal responsibility of confronting racist behavior and comments.

The University is a special place. It is a community designed to foster freedom of thought and unconventional, even uncomfortable opinions. It attempts to provide an environment for inquiry in which innovation and creativity are nurtured. We aspire to an ideal of openness – an allowance not only for people to be different, but a recognition that diversity is the virtual core of University life. We have a unique opportunity at the University of Michigan to celebrate diversity to its fullest – to visit the world and various American cultures through the eyes of our students. As an institution, we all must continue to strive towards fulfilling our ideals, and to do better than we are doing. Please join us in an affirmation of our common humanity.
